

ACADEMIC SENATE

Meeting Minutes

April 28, 2020 Zoom Meeting 1700 W. Hillsdale Blvd. San Mateo, CA 2:30 – 4:30 pm Website Executive Committee 2017-2020

Arielle Smith President

Peter von Bleichert Vice-President

Rosemary Nurre Treasurer

> Daniel Keller Secretary

Executives Present

Name of Officer	Executive Committee Role
Peter von Bleichert	Vice-president
Rosemary Nurre	Treasurer
Daniel Keller	Secretary
Arielle Smith	President

Senators Present

Name of Senator	Division
Yvette Butterworth	Math/Science
Wendell Doman	Language Arts
Dyana Huaraz	ASCSM
Tatiana Irwin	CASS
Vince Li	Business
Teresa Morris	Curriculum Committee
Peter Nannarone	Business Technology
Minu Mathur	CASS
Sunny Martin	Counselling
Tim Maxwell	Language Arts
Liz Schuler	PD Coordinator/CTL
Kevin Sinarle	DSPS
Lia Thomas	ASLT
Ellie Tayag	Library
Lale Yurtseven	Business/Technology
Lale Yurtseven Others Present	Business/Technology

Name	Representing
Wissem Bennani	Global Learning, Skyline
Laura Demsetz	Dean, CASS
Heidi Diamond	Dean, Business/Tech
Mike Holtzclaw	VPI CSM
Jing Luan	International Education
Aaron McVean	Vice Chancellor, Ed Services

Opening Procedures

Item	Presenter	Time	Details	Action/ Information /Procedure
Approval of today's agenda	President	2:35	Approved with one addition (review of the faculty leadership proposal)	Procedure
Approval of past minutes	President	2:38	Approved	Procedure
Approval of past minutes Public Comment	President Public	2:38 2:40	Rosemary: We are still working without a contract. Let's hope that with a new chancellor we will be able to get it finalized sooner. Kevin: During our last meeting, we talked about creating some guidelines for instructors working with students needing DRC accommodations. We have developed a handout with some guidelines that will be sent to all faculty via email. Peter: We have been getting questions about the ten hours stipend for preparing for online classes negotiated between the union and district. The language makes it sound like we can only apply for it for training on pedagogy—is this true or can we apply it to any work we did to prepare for the transition? Lia also noted that the time for the training might need to be more flexible: the library was still open even after the campus was closed, but library faculty were working on the transition during those days—can they claim the work they did as part of the time? Aaron: the ten hours is for any training, or just the time it took to make this transition. The bottom line: if you had to transition, it can be for the training and/or the time it took. It is intentionally wide open—no pre- approvals are necessary. Tim Maxwell: what is the current status of requests for computer equipment and hotspots—are they available to all students in need?	Procedure Information Aaron will try to get an update. Yvette: a reminder that everyone is invited to the Guided Pathways "mix and mingle." Links to the Zoom conference were sent over email. Wear a crazy hat or CSM wear, meet with your colleagues, have some fun.

Tatiana: A reminder that AFT is passing around a petition to sign in support of the contract negotiations—to try to put some pressure on the board. Please sign it if you have not already done so.

	Item	Presenter	Time	Details	Action (Motion/Resolution)/ Information//Discussio n
1	President's Report	Arielle	2:50	Announcements and updates Faculty should have received a link (sent out today) to a new survey focusing on the transition to the online classes. You should also look out for an email from Jeramy in the next two days providing some guidance on finals. There is a group that has been working on this for the last week and a half. We still have a call for applicants for the faculty evaluation guidance committee.	Information
2	ASCSM Update	ASCSM	2:50	Dyana Huaraz, ASCSM Rep—elections for student government opened on Monday and will close Thursday.	Information
3	Standing Committee Reports	Teresa	2:50	a). The Curriculum Committee met last Thursday and the last meeting is in two weeks We have been focused on the GE areas and some review of our regular and substantive contact policy. This policy is particularly important right now because it will change and enhance what our DE policy looks like. The DE supplement will change to be more robust, specifically because state guidelines have changed a little bit. You will hear more about these changes. We will keep looking at this issue as well.	Information Liz		b). The Teaching and Learning Committee met yesterday afternoon. We are doing contingency planning for August but there is a lot of uncertainty right now—we don't know if we are going to try to hold the August flex day online, and the District hasn't decided about opening day for fall.

				<ul> <li>a). Regular and Substantive Contact policy We discussed the current draft of this policy, which went to the curriculum committee on Thursday.</li> <li>Rosemary: some of the language about substantive contact seems vague and unrealistic. In a live classroom, you always</li> </ul> We discussed the current draft of this policy, which went to the curriculum We discussed the current draft of this 1
5	Action Items		3:05	Action Items 3:00-3:15	Action
				Other Informational Updates: AFT – Paul Bissember could not be here today but will be here for the last meeting of the term We will meet again on Tuesday and hope to be able to finalize the draft policy. All are welcome to attend.
		Lale		c). Distance Education Advisory Committee: The regular and substantive contact draft was reviewed in an off schedule meeting.
				Arielle noted that both faculty and students are saying they want that decision about next term made sooner rather than later. For planning and logistics, it would be easier to plan assuming things will be online.
				Tim noted that public health policies and the county will need to make this decision more than we will. It doesn't seem to be in our hands. Liz: in terms of planning it can really change things dramatically. For example, we could have speakers for the flex day—many more than we would have if we were face to face. But most of the planning needs to be done by mid-May. Programs like word jam and math jam have already made the decision to go online and a lot of other schools are making these decisions to go back online already. It seems likely that we will be online, and even if things are open, is anyone going to want to go to a room full of 200 people in August?

does it really mean to have contact? Lale:         You don't have to call or email each         student individually. Instead, regular         contact means that, for example, every         Monday you send out a message to all         students. Substantive contact is described         in a few different examples on the         document. Lale also noted that there is a         difference between content, which might         include something like a recorded lecture,         and contact, which requires some         interaction with students.         Peter: some of the language seems to         suggest that online courses must be fully         equivalent to regular courses. For example,         in the second paragraph, the document         claims that "interaction and content         delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F         class." Lale said that the main point is to         offer equal quality and quanity of         instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent         experience. We could revise the line to say         something like "should attempt to         simulate" a face to face class.         Teresa: we can change the language of         some of the principles, but the policy         needs to be very clear that our online         classes are not correspondence courses. <th></th> student individually. Instead, regular         contact means that, for example, every         Monday you send out a message to all         students. Substantive contact is described         in a few different examples on the         document. Lale also noted that there is a         difference between content, which might         include something like a recorded lecture,         and contact, which requires some         interaction with students.         Peter: some of the language seems to         suggest that online courses must be fully         equivalent to regular courses. For example,         in the second paragraph, the document         claims that "interaction and content         delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F         class." Lale said that the main point is to         offer equal quality and quantity of         instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent         experience. We could revise the line to say         something like "should attempt to         simulate" a face to face class.         Teresa: we can change the language of         some of the principles, but the policy         needs to be very clear that our online         classes are not correspondence courses.         Regular and substantive contact with         students is an essential difference between contact means that, for example, every Monday you send out a message to all students. Substantive contact is described in a few different examples on the document. Lale also noted that there is a difference between content, which might include something like a recorded lecture, and contact, which requires some interaction with students.Peter: some of the language seems to suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however Monday you send out a message to all students. Substantive contact is described in a few different examples on the document. Lale also noted that there is a difference between content, which might include something like a recorded lecture, and contact, which requires some interaction with students.Peter: some of the language seems to suggest that online courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however students. Substantive contact is described         in a few different examples on the         document. Lale also noted that there is a         difference between content, which might         include something like a recorded lecture,         and contact, which requires some         interaction with students.         Peter: some of the language seems to         suggest that online courses must be fully         equivalent to regular courses. For example,         in the second paragraph, the document         claims that "interaction and content         delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F         class." Lale said that the main point is to         offer equal quality and quantity of         instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent         experience. We could revise the line to say         something like "should attempt to         simulate" a face to face class.         Teresa: we can change the language of         some of the principles, but the policy         needs to be very clear that our online         classes are not correspondence courses.         Regular and substantive contact with         students is a nessential difference between         these types of instruction. So however <ul> <li>in a few different examples on the document. Lale also noted that there is a difference between content, which might include something like a recorded lecture, and contact, which requires some interaction with students.</li> <li>Peter: some of the language seems to suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.</li> <li>Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however</li> </ul> document. Lale also noted that there is a difference between content, which might include something like a recorded lecture, and contact, which requires some interaction with students.         Peter: some of the language seems to suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.         Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however difference between content, which might include something like a recorded lecture, and contact, which requires some interaction with students.Peter: some of the language seems to suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however <ul> <li>include something like a recorded lecture, and contact, which requires some interaction with students.</li> <li>Peter: some of the language seems to suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.</li> <li>Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however</li> </ul> and contact, which requires some interaction with students.         Peter: some of the language seems to suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.         Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however Image:
Peter: some of the language seems to suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class. Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however suggest that online courses must be fully equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class. Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however equivalent to regular courses. For example, in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class. Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however <ul> <li>in the second paragraph, the document claims that "interaction and content delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.</li> <li>Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however</li> </ul> delivery must parallel an equivalent F2F class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however <ul> <li>class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.</li> <li>Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>class." Lale said that the main point is to offer equal quality and quantity of instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.</li> <li>Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.</li> <li>Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>instruction, not so much a 100% equivalent experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.</li> <li>Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however</li> </ul> experience. We could revise the line to say something like "should attempt to simulate" a face to face class.         Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however simulate" a face to face class. Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however Teresa: we can change the language of some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however some of the principles, but the policy needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however needs to be very clear that our online classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however classes are not correspondence courses. Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however Regular and substantive contact with students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however students is an essential difference between these types of instruction. So however important to keep this distinction clear.
Mike H: we can make changes to the language, but it is also important to act quickly—we can't afford to delay this over the summer. The language also has to be generic enough to be our campus policy on DE, but it also has to be specific enough so that accreditors can see that these classes meet the criteria for distance education.
Lia: Regarding contact: weekends, holidays, breaks,we should be clear about whether faculty are really expected to respond to students during all these times. Arielle suggested that we can change the language to say that we should respond within two business days. Arielle noted that we are hoping to have this implemented by the fall term. Are we OK with not reviewing it again? Peter asked that we see it one more time, but Lale said there is a plan to have some summer training and we can't wait on a policyIf we wait another two weeks it may be too late. Arielle: we are not going to vote on it here because it is up to the DE and Curriculum Committee. If you want to send feedback before then, please send it to Arielle.

6.	Discussion items	Jing, Mike, Aaron, Wissem	3:40	<ul> <li>a). GOAL program</li> <li>Mike: The GOAL program started as a pilot last fall at Skyline. Since then, we have been involved in further conversations hoping to explain the program. Today, Jing and Aaron will be telling us more about this program. Wissem, who led the program at Skyline, can then answer questions about how it has been going.</li> <li>Jing: Our International Ed program is now among the top 20 in the country and is ranked second in Northern California. So we have wanted to continue innovating to address the needs of the community more. We have been talking about diversifying our offerings including online classes. We are trying to preserve what we have—to make sure that the current F1 students are coming to us, but also to make sure that we are addressing these needs in a global context.</li> <li>Aaron: We have already started a program at Skyline for career education (CE) courses. But with Covid 19, we are now thinking of students who may not be able to be here at all. There is also an opportunity to provide online education to a broader community, like a hybrid of</li> </ul>	Discussion

[]
	students who might start online and then come here. We would like also to open the ability for students to take career ed courses in high demand fields for students in other countries.
	This also includes students who are planning to transfer to other colleges for four year degrees. Currently, CE certificates, like early childhood education, can be earned online. International students also come out of high schools for concurrent enrollment. Among other advantages: There is no visa required to take courses from home countries, so this reduces travel, housing, and transportation issues.
	At the same time, there are many how At the same time, there are many new challenges with an online program such as this, so we need to identify support services for these students.
	Wissem: At Skyline, we had a small group of four students taking courses in economics and business. Out of the four, three then came to Skyline for face-to-face classes, and all three are planning to transfer. We have learned a lot from this group of students that we hope will help in the expanded pilot we are going to implement in fall 2020. For the expanded pilot, we will accept a larger group of students in various academic disciplines and hopefully at our other colleges.
	Aaron: the next steps include putting a steering committee together to help guide this through fall. Our timeline isn't ideal because of the emergency. because of the entergency.
	Aaron will be sending details to all three senate presidents to request the formation of a steering committee. Ideally, this group will include people from key areas—math, English, ESL—as well as popular disciplines such as business, as well as representatives from counselling.

Questions:
Rosemary: given that this takes place only online, how do we know that the registered students are even the people who are taking the class? It would also help to get a better sense of the rationale: this seems like just an opportunity for money. When students are on campus, they interact with students and participate, but when it is online, what is the benefit for our students who are here?
Aaron: In response to the first question, one of the steering committee's major goals is to make sure that we verify the identity of students who are fully online.
There may be other issues that are particular to working with students who are in other countries—the issue is complicated and is something we are working on right now.
On the second question, about the rationale, one major goal is to introduce students to our system online with the hope that they will be here later. It's not just about money. At the same time, we should be aware that there is a potentially serious revenue impact from losing international students. We might not recover our international student community. We are still sorting things out, which is why it is important for the steering committee to be formed.
Lia: What about the international rules that complicate many of our online programs?
For example, we have not tested the library One Search program internationally, and there are copyright rules that limit what students can see in other countries. For example, YouTube is not always available in China. Aaron: this would also be part of the goal of the steering committee and pilot program, to work out some policies for these situations.

<ul> <li>Tim M: The idea that we are addressing the needs of the community with such a program seems questionable. Normally, when we say "the community," we are referring to the people who are actually here. This expands our "community" to include concurrent enrollment and students who may never be here. Is this really a good use of our faculty time?</li> <li>Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign dases to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion any want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations. Note</li> </ul> <ul> <li>program seems questionable. Normally, when we say "the community," we are referring to the people who are actually here. This expands our "community" to include concurrent enrollment and students who may never be here. Is this really a good use of our faculty time?</li> <li>Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted La's comment that there are limitations to what students and on their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who awart to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations</li> </ul>	Tim M: The idea that we are addressing the <ul> <li>when we say "the community." we are referring to the people who are actually here. This expands our "community" to include concurrent enrollment and students who may never be here. Is this really a good use of our faculty time?</li> <li>Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent offering are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may mant to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, some the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, some the evaluations</li> </ul>	needs of the community with such a
<ul> <li>when we say "the community." we are referring to the people who are actually here. This expands our "community" to include concurrent enrollment and students who may never be here. Is this really a good use of our faculty time?</li> <li>Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent offering are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may mant to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, some the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, some the evaluations</li> </ul>	program seems questionable. Normally, <ul> <li>referring to the people who are actually here. This expands our "community" to include concurrent enrollment and students who may never be here. Is this really a good use of our faculty time?</li> <li>Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted La's comment that there are a limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students on equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron deen't see GOAL a taking awy faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participating. Faculty who do want to participating. Faculty who do want to participating to the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about the stores or information about the squestions. Note</li> </ul> here. This expands our "community" to include concurrent enrollment and students who may never be here. Is this really a good use of our faculty time?         Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.         Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doen't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.         b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures         We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the reguest for information about these questions. Note include concurrent enrollment and students who may never be here. Is this really a good use of our faculty time?         Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Li3's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.         Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.         b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures         We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note students who may never be here. Is this         really a good use of our faculty time?         Tatiana also pointed out that some of our         statements about what we want students         to experience seem contradictory: we hear         that the whole point of bringing in         international students is that they come to         our campus and enrich courses here, but         when it suits the district, we don't ask         these students to even attend. Tatiana also         noted La's comment that there are         limitations to what students can do in their         home countries: if there is censorship of         some materials, we are not offering these         students offerings rae important, but part         of a much longer discussion. In response to         Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see         GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have         no plans to assign classes to faculty who         are not interested in participating.         Faculty who do want to participate in the         longer discussion may want to join the         steering committee or attend their         meetings.         b). Management and Academic Supervisors         Evaluation Procedures         We have had questions about dean and         other supervisor evaluations, and requests     < <ul> <li>really a good use of our faculty time?</li> <li>Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are no timerested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about deat as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul> <ul> <li>Tatiana also pointed out that some of our statements about what we want students to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul> statements about what we want students         to experience seem contradictory: we hear         that the whole point of bringing in         international students is that they come to         our campus and enrich courses here, but         when it suits the district, we don't ask         these students to even attend. Tatiana also         noted Lia's comment that there are         limitations to what students can do in their         home countries: if there is censorship of         some materials, we are not offering these         students an equivalent experience.         Aaron replied that the concerns about         equivalent offerings are important, but part         of a much longer discussion. In response to         Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see         GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have         no plans to assign classes to faculty who         are not interested in participating.         Faculty who do want to participate in the         longer discussion may want to join the         steering committee or attend their         meetings.         b). Management and Academic Supervisors         Evaluation Procedures         We have had questions about dean and         other supervisor evaluations, and requests         for more transparent information about	really a good use of our faculty time?
statements about what we want students         to experience seem contradictory: we hear         that the whole point of bringing in         international students is that they come to         our campus and enrich courses here, but         when it suits the district, we don't ask         these students to even attend. Tatiana also         noted Lia's comment that there are         limitations to what students can do in their         home countries: if there is censorship of         some materials, we are not offering these         students an equivalent experience.         Aaron replied that the concerns about         equivalent offerings are important, but part         of a much longer discussion. In response to         Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see         GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have         no plans to assign classes to faculty who         are not interested in participating.         Faculty who do want to participate in the         longer discussion may want to join the         steering committee or attend their         meetings.         b). Management and Academic Supervisors         Evaluation Procedures         We have had questions about dean and         other supervisor evaluations, and requests         for more transparent information about	Tatiana also pointed out that some of our <ul> <li>to experience seem contradictory: we hear that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries. If there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor revaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about thes questions. Note</li> </ul> that the whole point of bringing in international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note <ul> <li>international students is that they come to our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul> <ul> <li>our campus and enrich courses here, but when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul>	, <ul> <li>when it suits the district, we don't ask these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul> <ul> <li>these students to even attend. Tatiana also noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul> <ul> <li>noted Lia's comment that there are limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul> <ul> <li>limitations to what students can do in their home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul>	these students to even attend. Tatiana also
<ul> <li>home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul>	noted Lia's comment that there are some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note students an equivalent experience.Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note <ul> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul> <ul> <li>equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul>	students an equivalent experience.
<ul> <li>home countries: if there is censorship of some materials, we are not offering these students an equivalent experience.</li> <li>Aaron replied that the concerns about equivalent offerings are important, but part of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul>	limitations to what students can do in their
<ul> <li>of a much longer discussion. In response to Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul>	Aaron replied that the concerns about Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note	equivalent offerings are important, but part
GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note	of a much longer discussion. In response to
GOAL as taking away faculty time: we have no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note	Tim M's earlier point, Aaron doesn't see <ul> <li>no plans to assign classes to faculty who are not interested in participating.</li> <li>Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.</li> <li>b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures</li> <li>We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note</li> </ul> are not interested in participating. Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note Faculty who do want to participate in the longer discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note Ionger discussion may want to join the steering committee or attend their meetings.b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation ProceduresWe have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note steering committee or attend their meetings.         b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures         We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note meetings.         b). Management and Academic Supervisors         Evaluation Procedures         We have had questions about dean and         other supervisor evaluations, and requests         for more transparent information about         details such as when the evaluations         happen and what the regular schedule is. In         response, senate has drafted a request for         information about these questions. Note b). Management and Academic Supervisors Evaluation Procedures We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note Evaluation Procedures         We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations         happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note	meetings.
We have had questions about dean and other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note	b). Management and Academic Supervisors other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note	Evaluation Procedures
other supervisor evaluations, and requests for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note	We have had questions about dean and for more transparent information about details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note details such as when the evaluations happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note happen and what the regular schedule is. In response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note response, senate has drafted a request for information about these questions. Note information about these questions. Note information about these questions. Note this does not count for classified	this does not count for classified supervisors who have separate evaluation procedures.

Peter: is there anything that says that faculty evaluators should not be subordinate to a dean before they participate in evaluation? Mike H: we make sure that full and part time faculty get surveys for evaluations. Deans are then given the chance to name others who are working with them. But the core is always people who report to the dean being evaluated. Laura also noted that all adjunct and full time faculty get to weigh in, because the evaluation goes out to all.
Mike also noted that the transparency issue should be understood in terms of all of us knowing the schedule of evaluations, not the outcomes. We also don't share even the schedule or other evaluations with the whole public. Maybe this is something that should be shared only with the senate—just a list of who is up for evaluation each year.
Laura: back when I was faculty, if someone told me that the timing of my evaluation would be available for all to see, I would be a little concerned. There is no problem with the schedule being available in house, but not to the broader community—the outside world. Publicly posting it seems like a dangerous thing. Arielle suggested that we could have it on a SharePoint or other protected document that someone has to sign in to view. As a result of this discussion, we removed "publically" out of the document. This will come up as an action item at our next and last meeting. c). There was not enough time left for our discussion of the DAS draft policy reviews.
Teeka James has shared some feedback about the current professional development policies, which will be further discussed at the May 11 District Senate meeting. Teeka also suggested that we postpone decisions. Feedback is open until the 5/11 meeting at District Senate.

Final issue: the document asking for increased release time for senators: This came as a request from Skyline. We believe that the demands on our time have increased. So what this does is asks the district to increase the release time—to double it from 1.0 to 2.0. We will need more time to discuss this at the next and final meeting.

Future Discussion Topics

Faculty leadership proposal – increase in district funded release time (5/12)

District DE resolution2Strategic Planning (Aaron McVean, 4/28)3SEM update (SEM team, 5/12)4GP program mapper platform (Allie, 5/12)5CVC-OEI resolution of support (Aaron McVean,Nick Demello)6Promoting equitable practices in the classroom(TBA)7Faculty Participation8Enrollment Caps9SJRA Program Review ResearchCurricular alignment districtwide - resolutionDual Enrollment - AB288 clarification (Tiffany/Kelsey)Guided Pathways cluster activity (Allie -TBD)College Budget Update (Micaela Ochoa, Fall 2020)

2019-20 Senate Goals:

 Enrollment and course cancellation: create guidelines around class cancellations and enrollment minimums. 9/24 Workgroup established Ethnic Studies/social justice AA requirement Curricular alignment in district Adjunct Professional equity Dual enrollment (Oct 22) Physical Spaces/environmental scan, ADAcompliance in physical and online classes Protocol for 51-50

8.Equity in hiring9.Articulation process (Sept 10)